Aaron Knowles to step down from executive role

Iress has announced its group executive - product, Aaron Knowles, will step down from executive responsibilities in August 2020. He will continue with Iress in a non-executive role.

Iress chief executive, Andrew Walsh said: "Aaron has expressed a desire to step aside from his current executive role so that he can achieve greater balance in his professional and family life. Aaron also wishes to remain within Iress in a non-executive role, which will be finalised in the coming months.

"I commend Aaron for his decision to balance his family priorities in this way and I'm delighted we will continue to benefit from Aaron's skills and knowledge within Iress.

"In his current role, Aaron has overseen significant improvements within product in both capability and innovation.

"Aaron will step down from his current role in August, when he will take a sabbatical before returning to Iress in the New Year.

"An internal and external search is underway for a replacement for Aaron's role."
